Rachel Allen is a free-lance trumpet player and teacher from San Diego, California. In pursuit of her musical career, she has made great climate sacrifices. She received her bachelor's from Oberlin Conservatory in Ohio. Then, emboldened by her survival of winter there, Rachel studied in the near arctic, completing her Master's Degree in Orchestral Performance at McGill University in Montreal. In an effort to thaw out, Rachel has been on several more temperate international adventures including musical outreach at rural schools in El Salvador and a residency at the Festival de Musica de Santa Catarina in Brazil. Rachel has toured throughout Mexico premiering an opera with Orchestra of Baja California and regularly plays with the La Jolla Symphony. Domestically, Rachel has played in the Aspen and Idyllwild summer music programs and the Chosen Vale International Trumpet Seminar. Ms. Allen is a dedicated private music instructor and high school trumpet coach. Rachel also loves to bake and subsequently runs marathons and line dances.
